including the state's price gouging law. Among the hardest hit by what seems to be a propane shortage and the winter weather is the state's poultry farmers. Lisa F. Fountain, executive director of the Alabama Propane Gas Association, said certain areas are dealing with delivery issues because of increased demands. "I want consumers to understand there is not a shortage of propane gas," she said. "What there is,

is a logistical problem with transportation." Fountain said the issues lies with out-of-state trucks filling tankers in Alabama for deliveries to other areas have created a backlog at the state's two distribution centers. Locally, poultry and egg production is the county's largest agricultural commodity. The increased demand for propane nationwide has caused prices to spike.

accumulation. Crenshaw County Public Schools and Crenshaw Christian Academy were closed for business.

The county courthouse and local municipalities were shut down, and garbage pick-up was placed on hold. A multitude of businesses closed their doors in the wake of the storm. Reports of several minor wrecks due to icy roads came from around the county.

"We ended up having around 14 wrecks on Tuesday when everyone was trying to get home," Seabrook said. "No damage has been reported from the storm."

Seabrook said the county dodged a huge bullet with no reported power outages. Additionally, the county was placed under a hard freeze warning through Thursday morning, and the National Weather Service issued a special weather statement for the county Wednesday saying, "A sheet of packed ice remains on area bridges and roads most of today. Ice forms again early this evening as temperatures plummet. Surface temperatures will begin plummeting again. The melted slush will quickly refreeze into black ice both on roads and bridges and overpasses will be the first to refreeze." NWS said today's temperatures will be a dramatic improvement compared to Wednesday and that roads should not refreeze as quickly this evening and the freezing will not be region wide.
